Investing for Impact

Make an Impact

Supporters of social change have historically treated financial investments and grantmaking as independent activities. Increasingly, we are seeing these silos break down as investors seek or even require impact screens as part of setting investment strategies. Donors are also learning that they can go beyond making grants by using charitable dollars to invest directly in promising for-profit funds and social enterprises seeking to generate both financial returns and social impact. “Double bottom line” approaches using investment and/or charitable capital are called “impact investing.”

At Tides, we encourage our donor partners to consider impact investing as part of a multi-pronged approach to supporting the positive social change they seek. In addition to charitable grantmaking services, Tides provides a range of impact investment opportunities. Donor partners can recommend investments by a donor advised fund (“DAF”) in mission-aligned funds and in equity or debt offerings of for-profit social enterprises that seek both financial and social returns. Given the charitable purpose of a DAF, any financial return from investments is returned to the DAF and increases the capital available for further grantmaking and/or mission-aligned investing.

Our approach to impact investing mirrors our overall approach to social change: tailored, nuanced, and comprehensive. Tides offers impact investment options across various asset classes, risk, and liquidity preferences, time horizon thresholds, and social impact areas. Donor partners can select investment recommendations from any of the fund options described on the following pages and receive customized advice toward the development of a charitable investment strategy. Tides can also consider other impact investment opportunities recommended by the donor partner.

We work to ensure investment recommendations align with capital needs for grantmaking activities as well as impact goals.
